

Los Angeles Jewish Home Fact Sheet

Serving the community for nearly a century, the Los Angeles Jewish Home originally opened in 1912 in Boyle Heights to shelter five residents. Today, the Jewish Home is the largest single-source provider of senior care in Los Angeles.

Facilities

The Jewish Home's two campuses, Eisenberg Village and Grancell Village, covering 16 acres, are located in Reseda in the West San Fernando Valley.

Opened in 2007, the Joyce Eisenberg-Keefer Medical Center on the Grancell Village campus provides the highest level of care for 239 frail seniors and provides additional services in a 10-bed acute psychiatric center.

Inspired by cutting-edge research, the award-winning Goldenberg•Ziman Special Care Center at the Home's Eisenberg Village is nationally recognized for its innovative design and programs. The Center is one of the most advanced facilities available serving those with Alzheimer's disease and other age-related dementia.

The Home recently opened Fountainview at Eisenberg Village, a Continuing Care Retirement Community (CCRC). Fountainview is an upscale residential complex for independent seniors featuring 108 apartments. Amenities include an exercise/wellness center, salon-spa, a dining room, casual dining, lounge, private dining space, alfresco dining, creative arts center, movie theater with stadium seating, cards and billiards room, gardens, fountains, and walkways within the campus. Service amenities include gate-guarded entry, valet parking, planned social and recreational activities, and more. Fountainview is the fastest-selling CCRC in California history.

Programs and Services

A staff of approximately 920 oversees the delivery of high quality care and programs for the residents of the Jewish Home.

Each campus has a full-service, state-of-the-art medical clinic run by a team of on-staff physicians, nurses, and rehabilitation therapists.

Jewish Home services include: independent living; residential care; assisted living in residential care; skilled nursing; Alzheimer's disease and dementia care; acute psychiatric care; rehabilitative and post-acute care and hospice; social services and mental health counseling for residents and their families; physical, occupational, speech and language therapy programs; and medical clinics.

Leading-edge programs have been developed by the Jewish Home's Borun Center for Gerontological Research and Education to promote independence and quality of life for the elderly living in nursing homes. The Borun Center is supported through the Home's partnership with the UCLA School of Medicine.

Numerous amenities are offered to ensure an active, secure lifestyle in a warm, Jewish environment, encompassing a holistic approach to healthy aging that cares for the body, mind and spirit. Each campus provides creative arts, social and recreational activities, clubs, trips, cultural events, intergenerational programs, a gift shop, bank, post office, beauty shop, snack bar, synagogue, educational classes, therapy, and a fitness center.

Residents

The Jewish Home provides a full continuum of care for 950 seniors in residence daily and nearly 1,200 seniors in need each year. An additional 500 are served through the Home's community-based programs, including Skirball Hospice and community clinics.

There are 65 Holocaust survivors residing at the Jewish Home.

Due in part to the remarkable quality of care provided by the Jewish Home, the average age of our residents is 90. This is six years older than the average age of residents in other comparable facilities.

The average length of stay at the Jewish Home is almost seven years compared to the national average of 2.5 years.

Budget and Funding

The majority of Jewish Home residents are in need of financial assistance, and receive government entitlement benefits, which cover only part of their costs of care. Donations to support the Home's exceptional care are received from individuals, charitable foundations, and corporate giving.

About 25 percent of the Home's annual operating budget is dependent upon individual and business contributions, planned gifts, and foundation grants.
